NHRA Unleashed events embrace a new breed of drag racer and enthusiast looking for pure doorslamer heads-up and index competition on the track, ranging from the wild Pro Mods and Aerospace Components Outlaw 10.5 racer to the 13-second weekend warrior. The racing format is designed for full bodied (full roof, functional doors, full- fendered, left hand drive) vehicles. The format includes both "Pro" style eliminations (first to the finish line, no breakout) and "Index" style eliminations (first to the finish line with a breakout based on a fixed index).

NHRA Unleashed Rules Update

All racing in the NHRA Unleashed events is heads-up, pro tree (no handicaps). Pro style racing is offered in Pro Mod, Aerospace Components Outlaw 10.5, Aerospace Components Limited Street, and Aerospace Components EZ Street with class rules per the current 2010 NHRA Unleashed Rules Supplement.

Index classes include Aerospace Components 8.50, Aerospace Components 9.00, 9.50, and Aerospace Components 10.00 (run on a .400 pro tree), and Aerospace Components 11.00, Aerospace Components 12.00, and Aerospace Components 13.00 (run on a .500 pro tree).

Safety rules for all index classes are per the current 2010 NHRA rules for ET Bracket competition, with no delay boxes or throttle/fuel system timers.

An NHRA membership/competition license is required for entry into the Pro Mod, Aerospace Components Outlaw 10.5, Aerospace Components Limited Street, and Aerospace Components EZ Street heads-up classes, and the Aerospace Components 8.50, Aerospace Components 9.00, and Aerospace Components 9.50 index classes. An NHRA membership is recommended, but not required, for entry into the Aerospace Components 10.00, Aerospace Components 11.00, Aerospace Components 12.00, and Aerospace Components 13.00 index classes.
